Ingredient Highlights

Calcium is required to build strong bones and teeth.* Calcium is more effective in reducing the risk of osteoporosis when used with other minerals.* Most doctors recommend supplemental calcium to women of all ages; teenagers and women on low-calorie diets are at special risk of calcium deficiency.* For maximum absorption, calcium should always be taken with food.

The National Institutes of Health has issued new calcium recommendations:

- Children 1 to 10 years, 800 mg
- Adults 11 to 24 years, 1,200-1,500 mg
- Premenopausal women, 1,000 mg
- Postmenopausal women, 1,000-1,500 mg
- Men 25 to 65 years, 1,000 mg
- Men over 65 years, 1,000-1,500 mg

Magnesium works with calcium to build strong bones.* In fact, nutritionally-oriented physicians believe that supplementing magnesium is as important as calcium.* Magnesium promotes muscle relaxation and is needed for normal transmission of nerve impulses.*

Phosphorus also works with calcium and magnesium to build strong bones.* Phosphorus, as part of ATP (adenosine triphosphate) is the main source of cellular energy that our bodies use.

Vitamin D₃ is called cholecalciferol and is the only natural Vitamin D. Vitamin D is required for bone formation and enhances the absorption and utilization of calcium and phosphorus.*

Sorbitol is a natural sweetener which is safe for diabetics. It is found in some fruits. It is digested more slowly than sugar.

Fructose is found in fruits; in fact, fructose means fruit sugar. It is sweeter than sucrose (table sugar) and so less is needed.
