Historical Facts

It is believed that the formula of Praas was discovered by the sage Chyawan. He was the first to prepare this tonic, and used it to regain his own youth and longevity. Charak Samhita, the ancient Ayurvedic treatise written by sage Charak in the 4th century BC, contains the first historically documented formula for Praas. According to this ancient text, Praas is "the foremost of all 'rasayanas' or herbal formulations for better health.

A Proven Recipe

This unique 'jam' is a mix of over 40 powerful ayurvedic herbs with 'Amalaki' (Indian gooseberry) as the base. The other ingredients in this traditional recipe include ashwaganda, cardamom, nutmeg, lotus, long pepper, dried grapes and cinnamon in a base of clarified butter (ghee) and honey. Praas is an excellent method for daily herbal consumption due to its unique constituents of cane sugar, ghee and honey. Proven effective over thousands of years of use, these nourishing tastes play the important role of "carriers" that is believed to allow the herbs to penetrate deep into the tissues. This magic elixir is good for all, irrespective of age and gender, which is believed to create a harmonious synergy in the body leading to better metabolism.
