Barley Grass the Rediscovered Super Food

Barley grass also known as Hordeum Vulgare is a green grassy plant that has been cultivated since 7000 BC. Barley leaves are packed with vitamins, minerals, and phytonutrients to build strength and stamina in both men and women. In ancient Rome the Romans called barley grass the super food good for gladiator and Roman soldier.

Barley grass needs to be grown in nutrient rich soil and harvested at a young age before what is called jointing to obtain the most from this nutrient rich plant. When the plant forms its first joint it loses its nutrient packed value in the leaves. A good barley grass company harvests the plant in such a way that the leaves never touch the ground and when processed or dehydrated its done at a low temperature to preserve the nutritional value of the plant. Milling should be done with a cryogenic method which grinds up the barley leaves at room temperature or less which further preserves the nutrients. Now foods performs all the for mentioned processing techniques and purchases only organic barley grass. Now foods assure you that its product meets and exceeds its labeling of quality and nutritional value. Have you had your barley today?
